Director's Statement:

STILLZ is a Colombian-American director and photographer known for his surreal visual style that blends Latin culture with modern psychedelia. At 16, he dropped out of high school to pursue a career in photography, embarking on a whirlwind path that led him to emerge as one of the most celebrated music video directors of his generation. Early in his career, he was introduced to Bad Bunny and ultimately took on the role of the pop star's creative director.

STILLZ has directed dozens of Bunny's videos, along with those of global artists such as Dua Lipa, Arca, and Rosalia, landing multiple Grammy nominations in the process. A recording artist himself, he recently partnered with Japanese rapper Yuki Chiba on the ambient album Separated at Birth. His narrative debut continues his evolution as a genre-bending artist and storyteller rooted in raw emotion, visual experimentation, and radical explorations of cultural identity.

Synopsis:

LONG:

This is the first feature directed by Stillz, best known for his work with Bad Bunny. The film was produced by Eric Kohn, James Clauer, and Esteban Zuluaga. Harmony Korine is the executive producer. It is the first film supported by Korine's EDGLRD collective and truly represents a fresh vision. It is also the first film that Korine has produced outside of his own directing work.

The title is a reference to an old neighborhood in Medellin, which is where Stillz grew up, and it's a very personal project for him.

Cinematically, Stillz was inspired by a wide array of references, from Repo Man to backrooms. It was shot on location in Colombia with first-time actors, and the brilliant electronic musician Arca composed the score. The sound design is by Leslie Schatz, whose credits include Apocalypse Now and several Gus Van Sant features.

SHORT:

Medellin, 1987. A group of teen outcasts steals a news camera to document every detail of their dangerous lives. The first feature from acclaimed photographer and Bad Bunny music video director Stillz redefines the found footage genre as a haunting, poignant coming-of-age story with a disturbing twist. Set to an awe-inspiring score by Arca and produced by Harmony Korine's collective EDGLRD, the film taps into the anxieties of a youth culture from the margins of history yearning to be understood.
